The Household: Once lived a young woman named Cinderella. She resided in a large stone manor with her widowed stepmother and two stepsisters, Anastasia and Drizella. While they lived in luxury, Cinderella was forced to perform all the chores, from cleaning the fireplace to scrubbing the floors.

The Royal Invitation: One Tuesday, a royal messenger delivered a gold-trimmed envelope. The King was hosting a Grand Ball at the Palace to help the Prince find a bride. Every maiden in the kingdom was invited to attend at 8:00 PM on Friday night.

The Magical Transformation: After her stepsisters destroyed her handmade dress, Cinderella's Fairy Godmother appeared in the garden. With a wave of a sparking wand and the words "Bibbidi-Bobbidi-Boo," she transformed a pumpkin into a gilded carriage and four mice into white horses.

The Constraints: Cinderella was given a gown of pure silver silk and a pair of glass slippers. However, the Fairy Godmother gave her a strict warning: "The spell will break at the final stroke of midnight. Your carriage will turn back into a pumpkin, and your fine clothes back into rags."

The Conclusion: At the ball, Cinderella and the Prince danced until 11:59 PM. As the clock struck twelve, she fled, losing one glass slipper on the palace steps. The Prince used the slipper to find her, and they eventually married, living happily in the Royal Palace.
